One of the favorite moments of The Wolf of Wall Street fans was improvised by an anecdote Leonardo DiCaprio heard on his way to the set, says Jon Bernthal. A recent guest of the popular YouTube interview series Hot Ones, Bernthal was interviewed about the experience of working with Martin Scorsese and one of the most cited moments of the 2013 film. "It's the top of the mountain; nobody better, never will be", said Bernthal host Sean Evans of Scorsese. "I've learned more with this kind of limited role. My whole acting style changed.In the film based on Jordan Belfort's 2007 memoir, Bernthal plays Brad Bodnick, a small drug dealer and DiCaprio's Belfort friend. Bernthal steals the scene "Sell me this pen", one of the fan favorites. It turns out that the moment was improvised, Bernthal explained to Evans. "I use it as a great example of how Marty works", he began. "When Leo was going on set that day, his security was a New York detective and he said he had a job interview with the real Jordan Belfort. And Leo said, "Really? What was the interview? "And he gave me a pen and said to sell it." So, Leo, he didn't tell anyone. He just threw it into that scene. And everything was reactive from that.
