For some reason, many people believe that the ability to resolve crosswords is a distributed talent at birth for a few selected. That could not be further from the truth. The crosswords are not an immutable test of your vocabulary or intelligence - they are a learned skill that anyone can develop.Eprendizing new skills is one of the best ways to become commercializable à € à € à € and happy, masà à € ~ ~ | Read Moreno The game of words or puzzle asks as much as your brain as crosswords. Experienced puzzlers consider not only the literal meaning of each lane, but also the similar ones that they see before, frequently repeated answers, quirks of syntax, exchanges, cultural references - and, of course, the theme of the puzzle . Unfortunately, this means that crosswords can be absolutely used with recharfly. Everyone gets some place, and it does not matter what their capabilities seem now, here are four general strategies to help you improve. From the puzzles every day the only way improving the crosswords is to do many of them, and the best way to do this is to work them in your daily routine. For me, this means facing a few puzzles of an old book of 365 will be the crosswords of Shortz before bed every night. My mother prints Washington Post Crosswords and chips for them in the breakfast café; My friends moving from Bus or train are Diehard New York Times Crossword fans. The new York Times puzzles are most of the crossword words of most people for a reason: they are kind of finding and having a difficulty in classification. Mondays are the most common, sabbied are the most difficult, and the puzzles between the ramp in the day, so you can choose and choose those that work for you. That said, the New York Times is away from the only editor there. The Washington Post, Los Angeles Times, and Merriam-Webster also publish diary-style crosswords; If enigmatic crosswords are your gel, try the guard. Some organizations, such as Queer Crosswords and puzzles for progress, until it will send you original puzzles as a reward for non-profit donations. Just remember that each publication has its own style - dominating the Tricky Clue phrase in a Saturday New York Times puzzle, will not necessarily translate to From the post, and vice versa.use an Appif you really want to increase your crossword game by enrolling an application, like this of the New York Times, is a great idea. As much as I love them, puzzles of paper can not only touch the guys to use that you get with an application. You can easily check your work or reveal letter answers by letter instead of spying accidentally across the solution. This demystifies the clues just enough to make them viable, which is exactly what you want. In addition, most applications are your work, what you do to measure your progress. But in fact, the biggest advantage is accessibility: carry thousands of digital puzzles in your pocket makes it easy to make a lot of puzzles. When ... and how - trapacechoating is a sensitive topic among crossword enthusiasts, but there. They do not deny that it has its place. Crossword should be fun and repeatedly beating the same head against the same wall, praying for a different result, it is not my idea of fun. In addition, the frustrating is a bad teacher; Unless you have centrallys competitive puzzle aspirations, stubbornly refusing to look for answers or check your work will take you anywhere. Many games require a great time investment - at least if you want to have the best equipment, the à € | In addition, you should solve all the clues that you possibly can without help, but you can not improve without a challenge. A little strategic cheating can guide you to even the most difficult puzzles. Applications make this super easy: just check or reveal letters one at a time when you can solve a particularly unpleasant track. This will only give you enough information to (mainly) hack-a for its own, which, in turn, makes the answer more prone to staying in your memory. Paper pluzles make strategic trap a little more difficult, but thanks to the internet, not much. If you are stuck in a crossword of impressions, google all the citations track. Framing your research around the track instead of saying, how many lyrics you have to work, help you understand what the track wanted from you. Over time, you will find yourself needing less and less helps solve puzzles that had previously been real stumers. UPIF study you are about crossword maestia, the Internet is full of similar people who would love to help. A blog like Rex Parker is a great place to start. It solves the puzzle of New York Times every day, compares the difficulty to other puzzles of that day of the week, and divides the main parts of the CDIC / answer into a short post. Among the poles and comments, you will have a more complete image of the solution than if you just looked up the answers. You can also specialize yourself even further and brush your words from crosswords that appear frequently crosswords, but almost never in conversation. The New York Times has a questionnaire that tests your knowledge of crosswords, and there is a more general guide to dicionary. You may also predict, there is an entire website dedicated to CrossWordese, with a new word highlighting every day and an extensive file. If a statistical approach is more your speed, there are crossword response databases by AA. Data Scientist Noah Veltman analyzed a set of New York crosswords and responses from 1996-2012, then organized them by à € °1 Crosswordiness, and with what frequency they appeared. You can filter the lists by the minimum number of appearances or length of words and see details about any response. Likewise, XwordInfo.com will show the most popular responses and clues for puzzles per year or word length. Hell, you could actually go out and encode some training programs like this guy did, although it is not clear if your approach is more effective than just making a lot of crossword. This does not mean that you should build a robot or memorize clues to solve crosswords more efficiently; The best À à € œTraining strategy is what makes you happy. No matter how many puzzles you solve, or how fast you can solve them - only you continue. If you can do this, you will never stop improving. improving.
