Seven types of angels

Photo by AdoramasseyWe've solved New York. Chicago. San Francisco. And the biggest apple of them all, Phoenix. Now it's time for Los Angeles, the city where you can become anything, and vegetable juice can become lunch. Looking out from the Hollywood Hills, you can almost smell the possibilities; they've even triggered an air quality advisory.We need your best L.A. hacks. How do you beat traffic, what's your secret lunch spot, how do you politely refuse your waiter's script? How did you adjust when you moved here from New York? Did you know San Francisco thinks you're in a rivalry? What truths are hidden in SNL's Californians sketches?Travel tips are great, but we especially love tips for locals. What took you years to figure out about L.A.? What's your counterintuitive approach or controversial trick? We'll feature the best comments in a new post on Thursday. We may be able to speak directly to God through prayer, but according to the Bible, he reaches us through a variety of angels, each with distinct duties. There are nine types of angels within three major groups known as choirs. Regardless of where they are on the hierarchy, like us, they are individuals.Unlike us, because they are able to see far beyond a mortal timeline, they are extremely patient and forgiving. They are aware of our personal life goals and are assigned to assist us, but never interfere with our free will. Here are nine types of angels to know.Seraphim means "the fiery ones." It is the plural of the word "seraph." These angels are mentioned in the Bible as having faces, hands and feet. Each seraph has six wings, four of which they used to cover themselves in the presence of God as a sign of humility; the other two, they use to fly. They cry out "holy, holy, holy" and appear to worship God continuously. They are often depicted in religious art.These are the angels who are closest to God. They encircle his throne and emit an intense fiery light representing his love. Seraphim are considered "fiery serpents" and not even the other divine beings may look at them. There are only four of them and each has four faces and six wings. When they come to Earth, they leave their serpent appearance behind, preferring tall, thin, clean-cut human embodiments.These angels are the keepers of celestial records and hold the knowledge of God. They are sent to Earth with great tasks, such as expelling humankind from the Garden of Eden. Ancient art depicts cherubim as sphinx-like, winged creatures with human faces, not the fat babies with wings that now grace greeting cards and book covers. Ophaniel, Rikbiel, and Zophiel are cherubim, as was Satan before his fall to evil.Thrones' appearance is perhaps the most bizarre of the first grouping. They are said to look like great glowing wheels covered with many eyes. They serve as God's chariot and dispense his judgment in order to carry out his desires for us. The angels in the second choir can exist in a state of transition between the celestial and human worlds. They are considered heavenly governors, attempting to strike a balance between matter and spirit, good and bad.Under the highest angelic forms lay the "middle" angels. Read on to find out more about the virtues, archangels and guardian angels.Think of dominions as middle management. They receive orders from seraphim and cherubim, then dish out duties to the "worker bee" angels of the lower orders. Their main purpose is to make sure that the cosmos remains in order by sending down power to heads of government and other authority figures. Zadkiel (sometimes called Hashmal) is the chief of this order.Shaped like sparks of light, virtues are in charge of maintaining the natural world, and they inspire living things in areas such as science. They also take orders from the angels above and convert them into miracles for the deserving. When they make themselves known to us in their earthly form, they are musicians, artists, healers, and scientists who work with the power of love, as well as physics. The two angels at the ascension of Jesus are believed to have been virtues.In their celestial form, powers appear like brightly colored, hazy flames. Powers are border patrol agents between heaven and Earth. They are the angels of birth and death. Some believe that they also preside over demons who wish to overthrow the world, while others, namely St. Paul, thought the powers themselves were the evil ones. In any case, powers are a group of experts who serve as advisers in terms of religion, theology, and ideology.The third choir is best known to us because they are most like us with their vulnerability to the act of sinning.These angelic beings are shaped like rays of light. Just like a principal in school, it's the principalities who oversee everything. They guide our entire world -- nations, cities, and towns. What's more, they are in charge of religion and politics. As if their plate isn't full enough, they are also in charge of managing the earthly duties of the angels below them.But don't call on them to help you personally; archangels respond best when dealing with matters involving all humankind. They are the first order of angels that appear only in human form. As such, they function among us as pioneers for change in the form of explorers, philosophers, and human rights leaders. This order is most commonly known because they are mentioned by name in the Bible -- Michael, Gabriel, and Raphael.These might just be called "regular angels." They are guardians of people and all things physical and are the most common type of angels. These angels are sent as messengers to humanity. Personal guardian angels come from this category. Angels may also protect and warn humans as well as act as warriors on behalf of God.CONTRIBUTING WRITERS:Helen Davies, Marjorie Dorfman, Mary Fons, Deborah Hawkins, Martin Hintz, Linnea Lundgren, David Priess, Julia Clark Robinson, Paul Seaburn, Heidi Stevens, and Steve TheunissenOriginally Published: Sep 24, 2007 Image: piranka / E+ / Getty Images There are traditionally nine kinds of angels: Seraphim, Cherubim, Thrones, Dominions, Powers, Principalities, Virtues, Archangels and just regular Angels. However, this is in the Christian tradition, so the Jewish and Islamic traditions can vary a little -- and of course, angels often appear in multiple sources in which they are listed differently. For example, Uriel is a seraph and a cherub in some of his stories and a "mere" archangel in other tales.Angels of different types and levels perform different divine functions. Their personalities also inform what sphere of human or angelic activity they patronize, from the arts to the sciences to war to all manner of other pursuits. Then, of course, we get to the one-third of the heavenly host who walked out when God's beloved Lucifer, the Morning Star himself, stirred up a rebellion against the divine rule; they are still originally angels, but they're now also devils, playing a different role within the divine plan.All this means that, whatever your personality, there's an angel who might be a great inspiration for you. If you love to work hard and you get plenty of recognition, but you don't see yourself as the ultimate leader, you're a Michael. If you're just into getting things done without any attention at all, you might be the record-keeper Pravuil. Tell us a little about you, and we'll figure out just what name will be inscribed for you in the angelic pantheon! Wherever you go throughout the city, chances are that you're not far from a swanky fitness studio, high-end hair salon, nail salon, or buzzy detox treatment. The same goes for spas; they're peppered throughout the entire city—though they're found in especially high concentrations in the likes of West Hollywood, Santa Monica, and Beverly Hills. Why so many, you ask? It's simple. LA girls love a good spa day. Whether they go in for a manicure, a mud bath, a massage, or a combination of all three, spending time at the spa is their favorite way to refresh both their bodies and minds. So, when in LA, do as the Angelenos do, and make time for a little R & R at the spa. Rest assured there are some insanely luxurious options. Keep reading to see the six best spa experiences in all of LA! Courtesy of La Prairie Spa at Waldorf Astoria Beverly Hills The La Prairie Spa at the Waldorf Astoria Beverly Hills can best be summed up in one word: impressive. The airy, well-lit space is the epitome of luxury, yet still imparts an instant sense of serenity the second you step foot inside. Tucked in the corner of the iconic luxury hotel, the spa offers an assortment of different La Prairie facial and body treatments, all incorporating the brand's signature caviar ingredient. Our recommendation? The Caviar Lifting and Firming facial, which left our editorial director with a blindingly bright complexion. Pro tip: Set aside a few hours to take advantage of the full spa experience for ultimate relaxation. Location: 9850 Wilshire Blvd, Beverly Hills Arcona The first thing you'll notice upon entering the Arcona Studio is the clean, open, and welcoming atmosphere that mimics that of the beach located a few blocks away. They offer a wide variety of spa treatments, but they're best known for their effective facials. Try their Signature Facial Contouring ($105), which utilizes deep muscle facial massage and acupressure to drain puffiness and relax and tone the face muscles, resulting in younger looking skin. They also offer an LED light therapy facial ($50), which exposes the skin to certain wavelengths of light that target specific concerns--think acne, inflammation, or wrinkles. Location: 425 Broadway, Santa Monica Time Out LA The Ciel Spa is located inside the SLS Beverly Hills Hotel. We can say with utmost certainty that you would be hard pressed to find a more luxurious experience in LA (or anywhere, for that matter). They offer almost every spa treatment under the sun--hair services, massages, skincare, even IV therapy (which happens to be a super popular LA detox treatment). As for their skincare services, we love that they use Biologique Recherche products--a longtime Byrdie favorite. Seriously, if we could bathe in their Location: 465 S. La Cienega Boulevard, Los Angeles Bond En Avant This Japanese spa is like nothing else. Go in for a restorative massage in its light, airy, and ultra-soothing environment, and your life might actually change. Take it from Associate Features Editor, Amanda Montell, "Tomoko Spa offers the most luxurious, high-end, and truly restorative massages in the city. Possibly the country. From the chic, minimalist decor, to the impeccably trained massage therapists, to the techniques themselves (which blend eastern and western techniques to provide healing that is both physical and spiritual) it is truly a matchless experience. It's the most alarmingly expensive massage I've ever received, but also by far the best." Location: 141 S. Beverly Drive, Beverly Hills Elite Traveler The Hotel Bel-Air Spa is fully loaded with amenities. Try one of their private marble rain showers, mosaic steam rooms, or something called the Enclave, which features a private patio and waterfall (we don't know about you, but private waterfall might be the single most ritzy phrase we've ever uttered). Location: 701 Stone Canyon Road, Los Angeles Larchmont Sanctuary The Larchmont Sanctuary Spa has a calm and cozy aesthetic that will make you feel like you're away at a countryside cottage. But don't mistake the quaint interior for a lack of luxury. Here, you can chill out fireside in a fluffy robe and slippers while sipping on refreshments in between treatments (um, yes please!). Also notable, is that they focus on mind-body wellness, so while you might go for a waxing, skincare treatment, or salt scrub, your mental state will be just as refreshed as your physical state. Their spa treatments are designed to promote relaxation, confidence, and self-awareness. Plus, they're committed to using natural and organic ingredients in all of their spa treatments. What's not to love? Location: 331 N. Larchmont Blvd., Los Angeles November 20, 2014 4 min read In the book, Write Your Business Plan, the staff of Entrepreneur Media offer an in-depth understanding of what's essential to any business plan, what's appropriate for your venture and what it takes to ensure success. In this edited excerpt, the authors discuss angel investing as an option for funding your business.If you're having trouble getting funding for your venture under the right terms, or under any terms at all, you'll be glad to know about the existence of angels in the investment world. Angels are individuals who invest their own money, as opposed to institutions or professional money managers, who invest other people's money. Many angels are well-off professionals, such as doctors and lawyers. Some are retired but have tremendous expertise to share in a specific field. Others are successful small-business owners who have made a bundle with their own entrepreneurial efforts and are now interested in letting their money work for them in someone else's venture.Angel investors used to be a difficult group to find -- not so any longer. There are groups formed by angels and other organizations, such as Funding Post, that arrange for special angel and venture-capitalist showcases in various parts of the country. You can sign up and pay to attend an event at which up-and-coming entrepreneurs like yourself get to meet with many angel investors and VCs in one place. Have your short elevator pitch ready, and demonstrate the enthusiasm you have for your new business.Because angels invest their own money, you might think they are the most discriminating, difficult-to-please investors. In fact, as a rule, they're much more willing to take a flier on a risky, unproven idea than are professional investors and lenders.Angels often take a personal interest in a project and may simply believe strongly in the person behind it ... that's you! They're usually swayed more by personal concerns than by financial ones.While angel investors used to be located primarily by word of mouth, they're easier to find in the electronic age. ACE-Net is an electronic network of angel investors developed by the SBA that helps angel investors and small businesses seeking capital meet online. There's an annual fee to enroll in ACE-Net, which varies by state. You can also find the ACE-Net branch in your state on the website. The Angel Capital Association is another place to learn about angels and seek out an angel network—a local group of angel investors in your area. Keep in mind that, above all else, angels are unconventional. Many have little training in evaluating business ideas. If 20 angels turn you down, it doesn't mean a thing. Until you've gone through the last name in your Rolodex, you still have a chance of landing an angel backer.You may also fit angel guidelines if you don't need a whole lot of money. Institutional venture capitalists can, by pooling the funds of several different groups, raise vast sums. It's not unheard of for venture capitalists to invest nine-figure sums—more than $100 million—in relatively new, unproven ventures. But even rich, single investors like Bill Gates or Warren Buffett are unlikely to feel comfortable sinking that kind of money into anything uncertain.Your angels' capacity will vary, of course, but angels tend to start small and see how you're doing before adding to the pot. One of the nicest things about the angel networks that have formed in recent years is that they can pool their resources, giving you a few angel investors in one place at one time. This also makes it easier when you're preparing to meet with angel investors. Rather than meeting one at a time, you can meet several in one angel network or even a couple who'll spread the word among their partners so that they can decide as a group.
