Clicks that develop between adolescent adolescent clicks are that they develop among adolescents. In social sciences, the word "click" is used to describe a group of 2 to 12 (5 or 6) "that interacts with each other with more regularly and intensely than others in the same configuration O". [1] Clicks are distinguished from "crowds", as their members interact socially with each other more than the typical multitude (for example, go out together, go to shopping, practicing sports etc.). Multitams, on the other hand, are defined by reputation. Although the word 'click' or 'clicky' is frequently used in day-to-day conversation to describe relational aggressions or snarky, gossip behaviors of socially dominant adolescents groups, this is not always necessary. [2] Interact with clicks is part of normative social development, regardless of the genre, ethnicity or popularity. Although clicks are more commonly studied during adolescence, they exist in all etania tracks. Definition As children enter into adolescence, cultural, biological and cognitive changes cause variation in their daily lives. Teens spend much less time with parents and begin to participate in structured and non-structured pair activities. [3]: $\hat{A} \hat{a} \epsilon^m \hat{A} \pm \hat{A} \hat{A} \mu$ without the direct presence of his parents or other adults, his pairs network begins to become the main context for Most of the socialization and activity. There was an explanation given by B. Bradford Brown about the stages of psychological development in adolescents, and one of the stains he named "to fit the stage, which means finding safe affiliations and obtaining Peer approval. He said the teenagers spend a lot more time with their peers than younger children and are more influenced by the group of pairs than younger children. [4] These "Clicks" of "Clicks" fundamentally influence the life and development of the adolescent. [3]: $\hat{A} \epsilon \epsilon^{\hat{A} \epsilon} .155 \hat{A} \epsilon \epsilon^m$ [5] Maybe because they are perceived as an external threat Parental authority, undesirable changes $\hat{a} \hat{a} \epsilon \hat{a} \hat{a} \epsilon$
