September 2015 (09.25.2015) Å, Å, ~ "June 24, 2017Å € (2017-06-24) External links Skam Skam (Norwegian pronunciation: Å, [SKÅ € 'M]; English: " shame ") is a series of Norwegian teen streaming television On the daily life of teenagers in the school of Hartvig Nissen, a gymnasium in the rich Borough of Frogner in the West End Oslo. It was produced by NRK P3, which is part of the Norwegian public broadcaster NRK. Skam follows a new main character every season. During Aeration, a new clip, a conversation or a post on social media has been published in real time on the NRK website on a daily basis. Every season focuses on PA topics Reticular, ranging from difficulty, identity, eating disorders, sexual assault, homosexuality, mental health problems, religion and forbidden love. Although no promotion in front of his 2015 launch, Skam broke the viewership records. His premiere episode is among the most observed episodes in the history of NRK, and in the middle of the second season, he was responsible for the half of NRK traffic. With the three season, he broke all the streaming records in Norway, along with viewer records, in the neighboring countries of Denmark and Sweden, and attracted an international fanbase active on social media, where fans promoted translations. The show has repeatedly made international titles for its suspension of popularity around the world, and the actors of the show became famous throughout the world. However, international popularity has not been scheduled, with the music industry that requires the geobloc of the NRK website due to the musical license contracts only supporting the Norwegian public. The series ended after its fourth season in 2017, as reported due to a high production stress. Scam received critical acclaiming and significant recognition for his portrait of sexual abuse in the second season and homosexuality in the third. The series was pursued for its contributions to promote Norwegian language and culture internationally, as well as for its unique distribution format, adopting a new real-time distribution strategy, high commitment, snippet, rather than © Rigidity and television programs. He received more Norwegian awards during his race, being honored for his dramatic narration, innovative format formed, writing, direction and actor performance. The success of the series generated an American version led by Skam Showrunner Julie Andem, as well as more European status, four books containing original scripts and blooper coils. Hartvig Nissen School's main article: Hartvig Nissen School Hartvig Nissen School in Frogner in Oslo The series focuses on the daily life of teenagers at the school of Hartvig Nissen (Hartvig Nissens Skole), a gym (Preparatory high school) located in the Borough of Frogner In Oslo West End, with the Niels Juels Gate address (Niels Juel Street) 56. [1] The school is informally and widely known simply as "Nissen". Originally named the school of Nissen girls, it was founded by Hartvig Nissen in 1849 as a school of private girls who was the property of his headmasters That served the upper bii-agation. The students of him include many famous individuals and two members of the Norwegian royal family. The school was the first high school in Norway who admitted women. [2] The concept at the beginning of a week, a clip, a conversation or a post on social media is published on the Skam website. The new material is published on a basis, with unified content and combined into a single full episode on Friday. [3] The main character differs from season to season, [4] and the clay characters have social media profiles in which viewers can follow their activities. [3] The show allows the public interaction on the duration of the episode. Since then the format has been used in other NRK P3 series, vacuum and love].
