If you use Gmail, you already have a Google Account that grants access to various Google products like Drive, Docs, Calendar, and more at no cost. To sign in to your Google Account or any other Google product, go to the login page of the respective product and follow these steps: Enter your Gmail username followed by '@gmail.com'. Then, enter your password. If you add Gmail to your existing Google account, it changes your primary email address to yourusername@gmail.com. In such cases, the original email associated with your account becomes a secondary or alternate email address. To verify this and sign in using the original email, follow the given instructions. When adding Gmail to your account, there's a possibility that you might experience issues if you're using Sign-in with Google or Chrome Remote Desktop. If you don't have a Gmail account, creating one is straightforward. Go to Gmail.com and select 'More options' > 'Create an account'. Follow the on-screen instructions to complete the registration process. On the other hand, if you've deleted your Gmail account but still possess a Google Account, adding it back can be achieved by navigating to mail.google.com, signing in with your existing Google credentials, and following the prompts. Sign up with the Google Account you want to use for desktop Drive, and use multiple accounts at the same time if needed.
