I assume it will mostly be negative. I used to be a huge fan of him, but over time I've realized his analysis is kind of simplistic and even childish. It seems to just be a narrow focus on vague "economic democracy" to the point that he claims the USSR fell due to lack of economic democracy (which I think may be the worst analysis I've ever heard regarding its fall). A few other problems I have with him: his China stansing (which is really ironic given his org, Democracy At Work, has a Taiwan branch but no PRC branch since they aren't legal there, lol), his anti-vaxxerism, his borderline stansing of Russia's invasion of Ukraine, to name a few. Anyway, what do others think here? Me gusta escuchar videos o podcasts y sus videos largos me llaman la atención. ¿En tu opinión, es una buena fuente (entre muchas otras) para aprender teoría? Go to IAmA My short bio: Hi there, this is Professor Richard Wolff, I am a Marxist economist, radio host, author and co-founder of democracyatwork.info. I hosted a AMA on the r/socialism subreddit a few months ago, and it was fun, and I was encouraged to try this again on the main IAmA thread. I look forward to your questions about the economics of Marxism, socialism and capitalism. Looking forward to your questions. My Proof: www.facebook.com/events/1800074403559900 UPDATE (6:50pm): Folks, your questions are wonderful and the spirit of inquiry and moving forward - as we are now doing in so remarkable ways - is even more wonderful. The sheer number of you is overwhelming and enormously encouraging. So thank you all. But after 2 hours, I need a break. Hope to do this again soon. Meanwhile, please know that our websites (rdwolff.com and democracyatwork.info) are places filled with materials about the questions you asked and with mechanisms to enable you to send us questions and comments when you wish.
