Beta v14 Create your own template via our online tool or choose from the available RPGs to generate connected character sheets in a few clicks. Play online or around a table, without paper or pencil, thanks to character sheets designed and adapted to the mobile device, simply accessible from a web link. Write your own scenarios and create your own key points to keep you on track during the game, or download scenarios from the community for ready-to-use games. Take advantage of an interface that allows you to follow the evolution of your players and NPCs' character sheets in real time and to manage your campaigns thanks to many options. Create your own items and spells databases or use those of the community to quickly add them to your characters once the game starts. Share images or sounds with your players to animate your games and use an interactive map to manage the combat phases. Discover Character Sheet Online Warhammer Fantasy Roleplay 4e Vampire the Masquerade 20th years. Discover Astrenor, a medieval fantasy world, rich and complex, where conflicts and political games rage and where appearances are often deceptive. Explore this world in search of its mysteries and meet the different civilizations that inhabit it, in order to better understand this universe.

Take part in the conflict and make difficult choices that will forever influence your history and that of Astrenor. 1. Scenario Editor: A tool built into the GM's screen for writing scenarios and adding key elements and notes. 2. Integrated Chat: Module that allows you to chat with other players in public or private and to keep track of your dice rolls. 3. Formula Storage: Functionality allowing to create complex formulas and to keep them in memory to be able to reuse them. 4. Bestiary: Tool to create a database of monsters and creatures in order to quickly add them to your campaigns. 5. Turn Order System: Feature to manage the order of action of players and NPCs during combat phases. 6. Template Editing: Allow the edition of a form template already used in campaign. 7. Workshop: Space to add character sheet templates and scenarios from the community to your account. 8. Interactive Map: Module allowing to use a map on which to place tokens and draw to manage the combat phases. 9. Player App: An application that allows players to keep all of their character sheets on their phone and view them even offline. 10. Astrenor JDR: Medieval fantasy role-playing games in digital and physical format, including a rulebook, an introductory scenario, a campaign and pre-made sheets. Getting started with Dungeons and Dragons is a great experience. You took a leap and decided to tackle the rules and explore whole new worlds, courtesy of the game. First thing's first, though. You need to learn how to determine and calculate the ability scores for your character! How to Determine Ability Scores in DnD 5e In Dungeons and Dragons 5e, there are 3 ways to determine your Ability Scores. These methods are: Standard Array, Point Buying, and Rolling Dice. All three methods are allowed, however it is up to your DM which method the group will use. If you're looking for more beginner guides, I'll leave an interactive infographic below that can help you or a friend understand the game better. Be sure to check it out! The first thing you need to do before playing the game is to create your character. You call this character your "Player Character", and this will act as your avatar in the game. These characters have stats or "Ability Points" that determine how strong or how good they will be in certain areas. These are Ability Scores as follows: Strength Dexterity Constitution Intelligence Wisdom Charisma To determine these stats, that's where the 3 methods come in. You can use the Standard Array system to choose between a set number of values and distribute them according to how you want your character build. You can use the Point Buy System to customize your character more freely using a set table. Finally, you can use your d6 or 6 sided-dice to randomly produce values for you to distribute; some call this Rolling Dice or 4d63k (Roll Four Dice, Keep 3). The specific method you will use will be up to your DM, so be sure to ask your DM before doing anything. Character Creation is typically done under their supervision during the first session to make sure everyone is playing fair. Keep in mind that these are all on page 13 of the Player's Handbook (PHB) and that these guides work best in conjunction with the PHB. By the way, I work really hard on my content and it takes a long time to research and write all the information in the site. If you find it useful, please be sure to share and link back to articles for credit! How To Do Standard Array in DnD 5e To do the Standard Array method in Dungeons And Dragons 5e, you need to distribute a set of values throughout your character's Ability Scores. These values are: 15, 14, 13, 12, 10, 8. The modifiers that will be produced will be: +2, +2, +1, +1, 0, -1. The Standard Array eliminates the variability of Rolling Dice and sets a lower ceiling compared to Point Buying. This method is great for beginners who may find the character creation process a bit confusing. By using set numbers for their characters, they can focus solely on the mechanics of the game with a decently strong character at their disposal. For example, a beginner may want to create a fighter, doing this method may yield a character with an ability score distribution of: Fighter Ability Score Ability Modifier Strength 14 + 2 Dexterity 13 + 1 Constitution 15 + 2 Intelligence 8 - 1 Wisdom 10 Charisma 12 + 1 As you can see, instead of subjecting a beginner to a character that can possibly be very weak if you were unlucky rolling dice, or instead of subjecting them to point buying where they don't understand the use of each stat yet, they can have a moderately powerful character. How To Point Buy in DnD 5e For Point Buying in Dungeons And Dragons 5e, you are given 27 points to buy your stats. The stats are from 8 - 15, and each stat has a cost. Once you "buy" a stat the cost is subtracted from the initial 27 points. Using this, you are better able to control the stats of your character. This method is great for those who know what they are doing. This method undoubtedly has the less variability and the highest control with your stats. Min-maxing is a term that means maxing out the stats that make you strong, while minimizing the stats that you don't really need. This is sometimes frowned upon, because the purpose of these scores are to mimic the real-life equivalent of our skills, talents, and genetics. Here's the table: Score Cost 6 9 11 12 13 14 15 16 17 18 19 20 21 22 23 24 25 26 27 Source As an example, let's take the level 1 Fighter once again with a 15, 15, 8, 8, 8, spread. Fighter Ability Score Ability Modifier Strength 15 + 2 Dexterity 15 + 2 Constitution 15 + 2 Intelligence 8 - 1 Wisdom 8 - 1 Charisma 8 - 1 As you can see, you can just opt to maximize all the stat that you might need and just minimize the stats that you think don't. Again, this is a hypothetical and does not mean that this is an optimal build. How To Roll Dice For Stats/Ability Scores in DnD 5e In DnD 5e, Rolling Dice for Ability Scores or stats means that you need to roll a 6 sided-die 4 times. Once you do, take note of the results and remove the lowest one. With the 3 remaining results, add them up and you can use that for an ability score. Obviously, you can create a ridiculously powerful character with this method; alternatively, you can make the ultimate weakling. If you are feeling lucky, go ahead and use this method, if you know that you aren't the best at RNG or chance, go with the other two methods. Rolling Dice for ability scores can also sometimes be called 4d63k, which means roll 4 dice and keep 3. Let's make another level 1 fighter with this method: Roll 1 = 5, 3, 2, 3 = 5 + 3 + 3 = 11 Roll 2 = 4, 1, 1, 5 = 4 + 1 + 5 = 10 Roll 3 = 6, 1, 2, 5 = 6 + 2 + 5 = 13 Roll 4 = 6, 4, 1, 1 = 6 + 4 + 1 = 11 Roll 5 = 5, 6, 6, 3 = 5 + 6 + 6 = 17 Roll 6 = 1, 3, 4, 5 = 3 + 4 + 5 = 12 Final Values = 11, 10, 13, 11, 17, 12 Fighter Ability Score Ability Modifier Strength 13 + 1 Dexterity 12 + 1 Constitution 17 + 3 Intelligence 10 Wisdom 11 Charisma 11 As you can see, I am not a lucky guy... not lucky... at all. Anyway, there you'll find the main drawback of the method. However, for most, they can get an above average character with this method quite easily. For guys like me, I go with the point buy method. Do note, however, that these do not include racial bonuses yet. You can easily add a +2 to your strength if your character is a mountain dwarf and have a 17 for Constitution and a 15 for Strength. That would make your modifiers +3 for Constitution and +2 for Strength. Overall not that bad... you would still suck for other checks though. What To Do After Getting Your Ability Scores In DnD 5e, you need to determine your Ability Modifiers and Skill Modifiers after determining your ability scores. Ability Modifiers and Skill Modifiers are both derived from your Ability Scores, and these will be values used for different Attack Rolls, Damage Rolls, and Checks throughout the game. To determine your Ability Modifier, you can use this formula: Ability Modifier = (Ability Score - 10) / 2 Once you do that, just round down your answer and you'll have the modifier. Do this for all 6 ability scores and then you'll be able to fill out the stat block for your ability modifiers in your character sheet. You can find all this in the Player's Handbook on page 13. All the resources in my site need the Player's Handbook to be used in conjunction to make the perfect character. There's more about Ability Scores and Ability Modifiers in our in-depth guide. You can find it by clicking here. For your convenience, here's a table so you don't have to compute for them all. Ability Score Modifier 15 - 3 14 - 4 13 - 5 12 - 6 11 - 7 10 - 8 9 - 9 8 - 10 7 - 11 6 - 12 5 - 13 4 - 14 3 - 15 2 - 16 1 - 17 0 - 18 -1 - 19 -2 - 20 -3 - 21 -4 - 22 -5 - 23 -6 - 24 -7 - 25 -8 - 26 -9 - 27 -10 Source To determine your Skill Modifier, you can use this formula: Skill Modifier (With or Without Proficiency) = Ability Modifier + (Proficiency Bonus + Other Bonuses) There are two ways to really get your skill modifier, however you need to determine whether or not you are proficient in a skill. If you are not proficient in a skill, straight up use your Ability Modifier as a Skill Modifier. If you are proficient in a skill, add your proficiency bonus to your Ability Modifier and use that as your Skill Modifier. You might have other bonuses, if you do just add or multiply them accordingly. Just remember: the base skills modifier is mainly based on your Ability Modifier. You can find all these specifics in Chapter 7, page 171, of the Player's Handbook. For an in-depth guide on calculating your skill modifier, you can check out our guide where we use a hypothetical character as an example. You can find it by clicking here.
